Rest easy sweet lady. I will miss you very much. My love and sincerest condolences to all your family and friends. I will never forget your kindness when welcoming me to the online world of message boards nor the good times we had through the years.

I met Arden through the old AOL message boards back in the dial-up days. If it is possible to fall in love with someone that you never met, face to face, then I fell deeply in love with Arden. Her posts, private messages and phone calls got me through a dark time in my life. If not for our commitment to our children (mine in NC and hers in Texas) then we would have gotten together. When I eventually married a local love, she and Arden became best friends on Facebook. We always exchanged Christmas presents (usually ornaments from our travels) and always ended our conversations with "Love you More"..... often multiple times. I can finally get the last word, "Arden, love you more" and I will miss you dearly.

My husband, Ken, wrote the above story about meeting Arden on the message boards. I also met Arden through him on the message boards. We became great friends and shared many funny stories along with the disappointments and hardships in our lives. Arden could always find the light behind the darkness. I will miss her sweet smile and gentle demeanor. I was blessed to share my love for Ken with her....and to be the recipient of some of the cutest ornaments and gifts. May Creator give you peace and comfort in the coming days. Your family are in our prayers.
