Ava Jo (Spencer) Crow was born June 17, 1929, in Klondike Community, Dawson County, Texas to John Floyd Spencer and Loreta (Strange) Spencer. She was an only child helping her parents run the family farm during the summers. In her youth, she entered the Lord's Kingdom through baptism and attended the First Christian Church in Lamesa, Texas. Jo graduated at age 15 from Klondike High School, class of 1945. She attended West Texas State College, Canyon, Texas majoring in Art.

Ava Jo married Paul Deroyce Crow on November 24, 1952, in Lamesa, Texas. She was blessed with two children Charlotte Crow and Royce Evan Crow. Jo truly could do it all. As a farmer's wife she learned to make a little go a long way. Jo perfected her cooking, baking, making jams, pickles and jellies. Her love for sewing, quilting, embroidery, crocheting, and designing turned into a business she ran with Paul and family members. She also co-owned several businesses with Paul putting her artistic skills to use while possessing Lamesa Floral Company. Her hobby consisted of being a helpmate to Paul. Everything she did put her talents to work supporting their joint business endeavors.

Paul served as pastor to several churches throughout west Texas and south plains area. Jo was always by his side supporting the missions of each church. Although soft spoken she was fearless and tireless working in whatever capacity she was called to fulfill.
