“ With you, Daddy, a huge chunk of my heart goes to heaven. I learned so much from you about construction and growing plants & vegetables. You taught me how to not be afraid to eat raw vegetables right off the stand and how to build parts of houses from just an idea on paper. I'll miss all of your technical questions about computers and printers and working with you in untangling your bravery with both of those things. I'll miss sharing our mutual love of all things edible. Most of all I will miss that boisterous and child like laugh and watching you get excited when you talk about how great & loving God is. I know we'll see each other on the other side some day. Until then I'll try not to cut off a limb or smash a thumb using the tools you taught me how to use. I know you're up there 'cow-boyin' & watching over us all. The great provider and protector of family... You, sir, will never be forgotten. I love you. Your friend and daughter ~ Sue

“ My daddy was the best. He's only been gone a few days but I can already fill the hole in my heart getting bigger. I keep waiting for him to come around the corner or call me up saying, "Hey Sugar" but I know I'll just keep waiting and hearing his voice in my head until it too becomes too faint to hear anymore.

I'm happy he's not in pain any more and that he can be where he's always wanted to end up - in heaven. I know he'll always be looking down on me and my family and I hope I made him proud before he left us. I'll never stop being his little girl. Up until this year when he was too sick, he was always the first person I would call when I needed advice or a pick-me-up. I've missed those calls and moments over the past few months but I truly cherish the one's I was able to do.

I could go on...and I will..I love you Daddy. Its not goodbye. Its until....
