“ I dont remember uncle Lynn all that well but the second hand stories from dad could fill a book. They say you dont measure a man by the things he has but rather the lives he touched and if he left the same wake with everyone that he left with mom and dad he was a giant among men and they dont make many of thoes these days

“ I remember all the conversations we had out in the shed, and the advice he gave me. It never was what I wanted to hear, but always what I needed.
