“ I always admired aunt Pat for she was always quite the lady in the family. She was quiet, soft spoken, with a dry sense of humor, smart and loved deeply. The rest of the family were the entertainers with loud laughter and jokes and she was our audience. She kept the rule of you can't say anything nice then don't say a word. One day she told of her great travels to foreign countries and learning their culture and life styles. These are a few reasons I love her so much. She and her family never were the ones that lived close to the rest of us. But we all love her dearly and we felt she was close by.
